ATTACKED AT MIDNIGHT

Tells Strange Story of Visit by Men Who Made Demand for Money.

A story of a midnight attack on Edward Schou, an artist, of No. 212 West Forty-second street, said to have been made by two men who claimed they were acting in the interest of Miss Marie Alliman, a pretty young miniature painter, of No. 132 East Twenty-third street, came to the police to-day.

Mr. Schou, said to be wealthy and a son of an Admiral in the Norwegian Navy, is quoted as saying he had known Miss Alliman two years ago and introduced her to magazine publishers for whom he did illustrating, and that in this way she secured much work. He did not see her again until recently he called on her, getting a frigid reception from her and a young man she was entertaining.

The next night, that of last Saturday, the artist says two men, armed with revolvers, forced their way into his studio and beat him severely, and he only got away by climbing down a fire-escape, entering the photograph gallery of a friend and summoning detectives. His last evening produced a letter he said he had received, which read:

"Last week you butted in at Miss Alliman's room, on Twenty-third street. After that, my friend and I followed you to your home, where you denied us admission. After forcing our entrance, you made your escape down the fire escape."

"Now, I am a brother of hers and I came to New York on purpose to see about this proposition. Not so very long ago my uncle sent her a check for $500, which she gave to you and you kept. Now I want you to return this money, as well as other small amounts. And let me tell you if you don't that you will not get off as easy as you did last time, because we are watching everything you do, and in regard to gun play it will be worse than last time ever thought of being."

Mr. Schou declared he knew nothing of the check referred to. He says that during the attack on him, his assailants told him they came to "teach him" not to call on Miss Alliman. One of them, he says, claimed to be her brother.

Miss Alliman declined to discuss the affair. "I will not say one word about my brother or anything else," she said.

Board of Estimate Decides to Issue
City Stock Over Coker's Protest.

On the recommendation of Comptroller Metz, the Board of Estimate and Apportionment to-day voted to issue $10,000,000 in corporate stock to purchase property between Twenty-eighth and Thirty-sixth streets and Brooklyn, for dock purposes.

Borough President Bird S. Coker objected on the ground that the city was paying too much money at the rate of $2 a foot.

Mr. Coker alone voted against the stock issue.

Ideal
Melodiste
Player Piano

The "Ideal Melodiste" is almost human—it is the simplest, most-comprehensive and complete player piano that inventive genius has brought forth.

When you want power, it is strongest—when you want delicacy of touch, it is lightest—human fingers could play with no greater precision and beauty of touch.

You direct the expression—you control the simple arrangement which produces every tone-color effect which it is possible for a human being to produce on the piano.

Even a child, without knowledge of technique, can play any selection with the touch and feeling of a master.
